

UNDECLARED

 LA ROCHE UNIVERSITY

ARE YOU UNSURE OF A CAREER PATH? Many high school students are. At La Roche University we understand that choosing a profession can be difficult and, at times, overwhelming. That's why we offer a supportive environment to help you discover your talents, skills and abilities.

As an undeclared student, your first year at La Roche will be a productive one. You'll take our core curriculum classes, while working closely with faculty and staff to pinpoint a major that best fits your interests and capabilities.

Why La Roche?

More than 50 majors

You can explore more than 50 undergraduate programs, including the high-demand fields of business, education, and health and medical sciences, as well as creative disciplines such as graphic and interior design, film and media.

Student Academic Support Services (SASS)

This office helps you before and after you choose a major. As an undeclared student, you'll benefit from SASS by completing FOCUS2, an online assessment to help you identify interests, skills and potential occupations. Other services include career-focused workshops and seminars.

Smaller class sizes

You'll never be lost in a lecture hall or crowded auditorium. With our 12:1 student-faculty ratio, instructors provide you with personal attention to make your transition to college an easy one.

Affordable cost

We offer more than $11 million in merit scholarships each year.

A liberal arts foundation

The core curriculum classes that you take as an undergraduate student count toward any La Roche degree. These classes include writing, mathematics, digital literacy, the arts, natural and social sciences, and religion or philosophy.

Another fundamental course is The La Roche Experience, which covers the history of the University and introduces students to different social problems and issues. We also encourage undeclared students to enroll in an introductory-level course in a major they are interested in exploring.

On-the-job experience

Once you identify your major, the Career and Professional Development Office will help you find internship opportunities so that you receive real-world experience before graduation.
